London's wealth is highly visible. Skyscrapers are vast monuments to finance in the City and Docklands business districts. Luxury houses are not just homes but also top investment attracted by prestigious renewal projects. And with wealth comes power. London is a global city: its domination both in the UK and in the rest of the world is unquestionable. New York rivals it as an economic and tech hub but New York isn't at the same time the seat of US political power.

Not all Londoners are enjoying this prosperity. Two of the city's boroughs are among England's most deprived. A 2013 report by the Policy Institute found that 28% of Londoners were in poverty, seven points higher than the rest of England. And many poor households have already moved out of the city centre to find affordable housing.
